FAIRIES IN IRELAND.

the Little Paople. Here is a modern fairy story from Ireland; "One day about twenty years

"On a Sunday he was returning after mass and stood with a friend named Sullivan on the bridge of Killales. Looking toward a potato field on the slope of the rising ground to the odst of the town, a field which he was able to point out from the boat, he saw issuing from the lies a troop of 'little people," one being distinctly taller than the rest. At first they seemed rather blurred, then took distinct shapes and began to play the national game of hurley among the bare potato riga. He called Sullivan's attention to them, but for some time his friend could not wee them, then said he could, and they watched the game together for a time. Then the sun went in, and the fairies, moving toward the ilss, as if returning to it, vanished. Lisses are rough places, sometimes billocks, sometimes depressions, often bushy, but never

The "Book of Sports." The "Book of Sports" was a procismation by James IL, who in this publication in 1018 signified to his people the royal pleasure with regard to what sports, games and amusements might be practiced on Sunday. The king intimated that "no lawful recreation should be barred on that day to his good people." The sports forblocks in Sundays were bear and bull behting, howling and interludes. Those who did not attend church were not allowed to join in the sports, and no one could go out of his parish. The amusements allowed were dancing, archery, leaping, vaniting, May games, Whitson also and the netting up of May poles.
